The Rockland Business Association (RBA) held its first annual TechEXPO on June 27, 2013, at the Dolce Palisades Conference Center in Palisades, N.Y. The event was designed to give local business people a chance to view the latest technology trends and attend breakout sessions on several important topics.

The first session, on “Today’s Portable Office,” was presented by Danya Rogers Cohan, President of Gotham Telecom.

Following this was the keynote address where FBI Special Agent Andrew McGregor spoke on Cyber Security Threats. Patti Kanner, of Atlantic Tomorrow’s Office, concluded with a presentation on Electronic Document Management Systems.

The free event also included a networking luncheon followed by a technology exposition, where companies were demonstrating a variety of products and services to the conference’s approximately 80 attendees.

Main sponsors for TechEXPO included Atlantic Tomorrow’s Office, Superior Technology Solutions, and Ruckus Wireless.

Mary Ann Spitaletta, is Sales Director for Superior Technology Solutions, and a member of the RBA. As one of the conference’s organizers, she was very pleased with the success of the event.

Ms. Spitaletta remarked, “The RBA and participating sponsors organized the TechEXPO to draw the Rockland technology community together, to present offerings from local organizations, and to continue to build the local tech network. We were very pleased with attendance and the efforts from exhibitors and speakers. I know that this will be the first of many TechEXPOs and events to support the local tech community.”

The Rockland Business Association is a not-for-profit organization based in Pearl River that serves as the “voice” of business in Rockland County, promoting and supporting local businesses. With more than 1,000 member businesses, the RBA hosts a variety of events on a monthly basis.
